

Matias Alonso is the global managing director for the Accenture Utilities industry group. Mr. Alonso is also member of the Accenture Global Leadership Council. Prior to his current role, he led Accenture's Resources operating group for Spain, Portugal, Africa, and Israel, which serves clients in utilities, energy, chemicals and natural resources industries.

Mr. Alonso joined Accenture in 1987. He has more than 25 years of experience mainly in the utilities and energy industries. His key competencies are in mergers and acquisitions and post-merger integration, multinational operating models and transformation programs. He has also led several workshops, written articles and participated in conferences as keynote speaker on such topics as market reform, smart grids and sustainability. He is a member of several energy organizations including EURELECTRIC and Club Español de la Energía, and an active advisor at University Deusto in energy-related topics.

Mr. Alonso holds a degree in Business and Administration from Deusto University Business School. He was a Corporate Finance professor in that University and is currently a member of the board.